THE girl who has not a garden of her own nowadays is distinctly behind the times. It makes no difference that there may be lines of hothouses on the country place and gardeners galore to tend things under glass and in the open. It is a garden of her very own that a girl wishes now, and she is her own florist. Precisely what she fills it depends, naturally, upon individual taste, but the majority of gardens of those girls who might and do buy the costliest of flowers are running over by choice with the old fashioned blossoms dear to the hearts of our great-grandmothers.

There are herb plots, sweet smelling in the morning sun, and again when the evening dew falls: hollyhocks, larkspur, fox glove, sweet rocket, roses, China pinks, iris, peonies, and indeed numberless others long banished, but again come into their own. Some, whose roots were put into the ground last autumn, that they might bloom this season, have already put forth their first shoots, peeping shyly above ground as though fearful they are too early. It is up in martial array of swordlike leaves: lavender, gray and dull in winter, is taking on a soft green, and each of these facts is known to the girl gardener, who finds in them greater interest than she ever felt for golf or tennis, and who will refuse a morning of bridge for the sake of getting down on her knees in the warm, rich earth to tend her treasures with much the same joy she had with her dolls when a little girl.

For the girl gardener the season begins when other think that the grip of winter still is on. When lessons and classes will permit, she gets into the most comfortable chair in her own boudoir and begins to study seed books with a zest not always aroused by the novels she is permitted to see. If she is inexperienced in the work of gardening the list originally prepared for seeds assumes a disproportionate length, and she spends spare hours for a fortnight trying to decide which, for lack of room, she can best give up. With knowledge of catalogues comes even greater interest in them, but after a couple of seasons a girl prefers to add a few varieties at a time, experimenting and her back, and the sweeping, outward stretch and inward pull of the arms in raking help toward grace, as well as deep breathing. Weeding requires that she should bend and crouch in such a way that, without realizing it, she becomes sturdy and muscular, able to walk and to run, while at the same time the elasticity given to muscles about the waist prevents her from being anything but small there, however her shoulders may broaden.

GARDENING a FASHIONABLE PASTIME for YOUNG GIRLS

FIRST, PREPARATIONS FOR THE GARDEN

The outfit used by girl gardeners would be an astonishment to those who associate only pink ribbons and gilt handles with them. Practical, differing in no way from those selected by professional gardeners, are those chosen. Neither is the head gardener allowed to get them. The girl herself, accompanied by her maid, shops for hoes, rakes, spades and cultivators, "hefting" each gravely, that it may not be too heavy or unwieldy.

She has nothing superfluous, but everything required. A rake, a drag hoe for heavy work, a shuffle hoe for light soil, a cultivator, for all the world suggestive of plants, while the birds sing overhead and the spring winds blow through the trees. Transplanting from the frame to the open ground after spring has fairly set is a bit of work that brings joy to her soul, for then is the garden taking color and form. Those flowers which will best together are arranged in masses or borders, grouping tall ones to make backgrounds for others which are dwarf.

Unightly stones or stumps prove ideal supports for graceful vines or sturdy plants, and always as she works there is the odor of loam which, once loved, is never forgotten. Her temper, as well as ill health, is worked off in the girl's garden. It is impossible to be cross and irritable when the sun is shining and plants and flowers are about. With renewed spirits comes better and more vigorous health. Lessons that brought on splitting headaches are forgotten; problems apparently unsolvable become simple.

All this and the pure joy of living are the girl gardeners' finding in their work. In their rooms later in the spring are no flowers but those which they have raised, and to send some to a friend is considered a special mark of favor. As an out of door occupation gardening is more than a fad, for it has come to stay. It is only necessary to see some of them on country estates and to hear girls talk to be sure of it.

Fads in Fans for Young Girls.

FAN faddists declare that never were so many charming types of this accessory of the feminine toilette to be obtained and at moderate prices than the present season. They come from the four corners of the earth, but the Japanese and the Spanish speaking peoples are the great fan users of the world, those sold to the universe at large are made in Germany and France. America has not yet begun the manufacture of fans on an extensive scale.

Girl graduates are selecting fans of medium size and preferably of heavy white lace similar to duchess or prominently patterned point applique, mounted on mother of pearl sticks, hand carved or decorated elaborately with gold or silver incrustations. Others are of white gauze, lace edged and sprinkled with gold or silver paillettes, and some are of Brussels net heavily embroidered or appliqued with gold braid medallions framing pictures after Watteau.

Instead of ostrich feathers mounted on elaborately carved ivory sticks the bird fans of the moment are composed chiefly of short wings. The latest Parisian fancy is the all quill fan formed of three curving points and tinted most brilliantly, the wide mounting sticks painted in hazy Red Sea, as well as in Aden. Arabia, from ostrich feathers in natural colors—black, white and gray—mounted on bone or ivory.

The Hawaiian, Samoan and Tongan islands send to America wonderful fans made from palm leaves, woven with various kinds of grasses and decorated with interlacing colored ribbons. These fans have been for sale for years on the Pacific coast, owing to their close relations with the South Seas, but are comparatively a novelty on this side of the continent.

THE WORK OF PUTTING ROOTS INTO THE GROUND WILL MAKE THE WAIST SLIMMER.

A tiny plough, and a lightweight spade are, with a weeder and trowel, all she wishes. To kneel on, when the ground is damp, she has a round straw "seat." This is the one luxury permitted.

In planting time a "dibble" is in evidence, and with this she makes holes into which roots are placed. With a planting line, a cord stretched tight between two pegs, she has a guide to keep her straight, and after this she requires aid from no man.

From the time that seeds go into the ground, "when danger of frost is past," as the books say, until the cold of the following autumn kills the blossoms, each stage of the growth is cared for by the girls themselves.

Those who really love the pastime in the beginning have a cold frame at the earliest opportunity, because, with it, plants may be sooner begun. More than one girl has done much of the building of this herself, although, unless she is strong, the trench in which to sink the frame requires muscles, both in arms and back, and they have not always been previously developed. Preparing a rich compost for the seed bed is by no means difficult, however, and from that time on no hands but those of the young gardener may touch it.

When the seeds, planted in tiny drills, have come into leaf, she thins and trans-

Many Novelties in Stationery.

DECIDEDLY novel is some of the lighter than those of winter prevail. If stationery that comes in with the spring season. Even in monograms a blue so delicate as to be almost white, things quite new are to be seen, and a shade of gray, equally pale, bids however pretty may be the dies girls have fair to be much used.

The season has brought out some of the latest. The line of stationery, one of two which are thoroughly logical. For example, the girl who is going to Europe will like the interlined envelopes that will preserve the pages within from prying eyes. The objection to so-called "foreign" paper, for transatlantic correspondence, is the undesirable because of its lightness and reduction of postal expenses, has always been that the thin envelopes necessitated folding an extra bit of paper over the letter. This the interlined envelopes entirely do away with, the inside case being precisely like the outer, except that where the latter is white, the inside is blue or gray, the tint showing through the outside. The linings are not detachable, so there is no danger of their slipping out of place.

A possible fad for the girl who likes eccentricities is note paper with a hem-stitched edge. Its chief merit is lack of offensiveness, more than can be said for some of the so-called novelties, which are blatant and conspicuous, more than suggestive of vulgarity on the part of those who use them.

For informal notes, to be written hastily, sanction has been given to the use of pads of paper, each sheet of which, when folded, makes its own envelope. These cannot be called new, as they were first seen some years ago, but it is only recently that they have been used to any extent. As originally made the ends were perforated to facilitate opening, but this is no longer done, a crease taking the place of the holes. This paper can never be used for any formal notes.

Pearls the Favorites Now.

PEARL money is no longer regarded as a matter of the expenditure of pennies, but of dollars, so numerous are the purposes for which fancy pins are now employed. In fact, to dress herself smartly the average young woman needs a large assortment of stick pins, sash pins, belt pins, neck pins, veil pins, bar pins and that pins, which are of so many distinctive designs, metals, compositions and colors that they should be worn in sets rather than promiscuously.

At the moment, pearls—and their composition imitations—are exceedingly popular, and are much worn by girls in the form of bar pins, which are of various shapes, oval and stick shapes, measuring several inches in width or length, as the case may be. "Incidental" pins of composition pearl represent flower petals, spheres and nuggets, while those having the metal bars are set with solitary pearls, or with the seed pearls thickly on.

THE variety and beauty of parasol handles for a girl who can afford to buy without considering the cost, particularly, seem never to have been so great as this season. Not only are precious metals employed, but minerals well high as priceless are worked into most beautiful, if simple, shapes. Ivory is carved with the delicacy and grace of fairy work, while woods, natural and treated, are wrought into things of beauty. Best of all, the styles between these suited to a girl and an older woman are so strictly defined that there is no danger of the former being suspected of having borrowed her mother's. Those for the latter are ornate, while for girls they are simple in their elegance.

Jade, that valuable Japanese stone, is to be enormously fashionable this summer, whenever it can be employed, and it is to be seen for parasols treated in many different ways. One design is simply a plain, graceful, pear shaped knob, its beauty due solely to the shading and translucency of the stone and the grace of form. An elaboration of this, which might be carried by a girl of eighteen, has the handle sprinkled with the tiniest of diamonds, deeply inset, and there are gold tips to finish the frame ribs, as well as a gold clasp for the strap. These sets of rib tips, either in gold, silver or ivory, city clasps to correspond, are now considered an inseparable part of parasols, and are purchased with the handles. The tips are quite morosement and, while not small, cannot be called large.

Some long, slender crooks are out of jade, and less expensive, but truly charming, are handles cut from carnelian and various stones.

These show most exquisite shadings and are particularly suited to coverings of silk in solid colors, the shades, of course, matching the handle.

Copper, beaten and worked in most artistic forms, is a novelty of the season. The metal, treated with acids, becomes a mass of dull yet gorgeous greens and blues, and so called "peacock eyes" are made in the additional ornament. The handle shows this gorgeous fish-like line for conventional silk, being made longer and more slender. The tail is mounted on an unpolished stick of olive wood. In other handles the copper is merely twisted, bent or chased, but the dull shading always obtains. The designs are heavy in the hand, as the metals are allowed.

Dull effects in trimmings but fair to hold popular favor this season. Gold is treated in this fashion so too is silver. Some of the parasol handles are long and slender, others are short and thick. Some, half with a very small seed pearl, are quite suitable for girls to carry in the afternoon, because so delicate and lightly worked out are the designs that they are too slight for a grown person to think of using. With every effort to have this lightness, filigree does not form any of the handles and rarely is seen even as ornaments. Decorations are exclusively either jewels or enamels, with sometimes a touch of a contrasting metal. This latter marks the influence of Japanese work, that will be used so much this summer.

An example of a combination of metals is shown in a dragon, done in unpolished silver, veillings and points being gold. This topped an unburnished gold stick.

While Dresden and porcelain are still used for parasol handles, they are nothing like so much in evidence as a few years ago. Exquisite enamel designs have taken their place, and for girls there are sticks finished in this way, there being simply a knob at the end. In one instance the knob took the form of a chrysanthemum, and another consisted of three field daisies done in natural colors. Such work as this is the exception, however, and a thread of gold and silver, gracefully inlaid, is usually decoration sufficient.

Most beautiful are handles of ivory, and, besides, birds, fish and men and women, literally are seen, not to mention most creative effects of flowers. For example, in one handle fish, flowers and leaves are carved in tall, graceful groups against the solid background; masses of chrysanthemums appear upon another handle. Little junks and pagodas form most attractive decorations, and any of these designs is to be found on both short and long sticks.

Incidentally it may be said that the majority of these handles are so frail as to splinter at the first slip, and, once broken, to mend them is well nigh impossible.

Dainty Purses for Summer Season

FASHION has not yet decreed that girls, like their elders, shall have a purse or bag to match each frock, but should that automatic dame decide there would be not the least difficulty in obeying her behest. Large purses and small, light ones and dark, plain and embellished in various ways are thus fronted, all ages to choose from this spring, and always providing that the purse is smaller, their portemonnaies differ little from those of their mothers.

Morocco, next to nishkin, stands at the head of leathers to be chosen by girls of taste. Pizskin, while as regulation as duskin gloves, is like the latter, for it might be said, tailor use. This is in contradistinction to dress, for a girl frocked for afternoon would be wholly inharmonious in outfit if she were carrying a pizskin purse. This is where moose, suede and calf, the latter finished in all ages to choose from this spring, and always providing that the purse is smaller, their portemonnaies differ little from those of their mothers.

Girls are not supposed to carry purple purses, although their mothers have approved the color for themselves. In shape girls' purses are much like a rule, although there is one marked exception. None intended, however, for young people are to be found fitted as dressing cases, including mirror, puffs, etc. Purses for girls are exclusively of carry bills and coins, not for toilet articles.

They may have bags, however, if they wish, and for these bags there is within a comparatively short time there are little purses which are charming. Made of soft calfskin, the top is held together by a wide leather tongue. In the center of this is cut a circle to permit of change from placing the little timepiece at the corner or in the middle of the flap. As it is, the effect is that of being the clasp, and the tongue affords ample protection.

Handles for these are flat straps of leather, but purse bags for very little girls never show this style, the handles then always being either gilt or silver.

A notice of the thing about the new purses is their lack of ornamentation. Far from being inexpensive because of this, their cost is increased, because only skins absolutely free from any imperfection can be used in these plain effects. The day of filigree corners and fancy clasps seems to be over, certainly temporarily. The only decoration permitted is a heading of gold or silver, sometimes lined, but more often with a plain, dull finish. Sometimes the entire flap is outlined, but there are purses with only the corners so treated. Clasps quite frequently are invisible, or, if in evidence, are decidedly plain, though not always small. If the purse has been designed with the idea of bearing a monogram, it is necessary that the clasp should be firmly out of sight, or the letter effect would be marred. All soft leathers, that is to say, suede and castor, button over on a jewel marching in color.

Pizskin and all pocketbooks intended for hard service are supposed to bear the owner's monogram. When the flap is large the letters are to be as big as is consistent with good taste and are placed squarely in the middle. Brass or silver gilt is used in this way, rather more than silver.

"Milkers'" purses are a fad of the season. They were in vogue two years ago and then were banished, to reappear with amazing success. The origin of their name no man knew, but in shape they are extremely narrow for their great length. They clasp with a flap. Mothers who carried them several years ago remember that they were most convenient from which to extract change, but that bills had a most unhappy way of being lost, owing to the shallowness of the pocket. This is a fact a girl would do well to remember.

The Watch as a Compass.

ALL watches can be used as compasses, says Labouchere in London Truth. Point the hour hand to the sun and south is exactly half way between the hour and the figure XII on the watch. For instance, suppose that it is four o'clock. Turn the hour hand so that it points to the sun and it will be exactly south. Suppose that it is eight o'clock; point the hour hand to the sun and the figure X on the watch is due south.

Delegates instructed for Taft, 513.
Delegates elected at conventions which endorsed Taft, 35.
Delegates who have declared for Taft, 155.

As stated, the total is 704, or 213 more than is necessary to nominate. To the opposition there is conceded a total of 227, leaving 49 delegates to act as they choose. The purpose of quoting these dry statistics is simply to confirm the direct statement made many times that the Taft forces were in an overwhelming majority, and that the claims and statements of the allied opposition were the merest moonshine. Their machinations have failed and nothing is left but to pass under the yoke and make terms with the conquerors.

One of the peculiar matters in connection with the settlement of the contest is that the 219 votes were divided between two Ohio men. Taft got 216 of them and Senator Joseph Benson Foraker the remaining three. Two of these came from Virginia and the third from Ohio. Nothing remains now but the arrangements of the details of the nomination of Secretary Taft next week, and the part that the allies are to play in this performance. The fight henceforth is to be perfunctory, and the work of healing the breaches in the party ranks must now be taken up. There is a persistent story in the lobbies that upon the roll call at the convention all of the states that have candidates will vote for them. This done, they will ask permission to change their votes for an assured nominee.

Whether this will apply to Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, is not yet known. At no time has he been associated with the organization of the allies, and as far as known he has never been consulted in the premises. It is a significant thing that Jos. B. Keating, the representative of Vice President Fairbanks, and the field marshal of the allies in this campaign and Arthur I. Vorley, Taft's representative, spent several hours together in conference.

The new and it is said real choice of the Taft people for second place on the ticket leaked out this afternoon. The man is E. E. Clark of the Interstate Commerce commission, and former chief of the Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors. At a labor conference here it had developed that John Mitchell, who has just retired as head of the United Mine Workers, has been drafted by the Bryan men for second place on the Democratic ticket. This has caused the men closest to Taft to think seriously about the vote of organized labor.

SEATS COME A LITTLE HIGH

Chicago, June 12.—Seats in the convention hall are the scarcest thing in Chicago. They have reached a top price of $125 per, and offers of $100 are freely made. Harry S. How to Clean Wooden Floors.
Many times when there is a large grease spot on the floor it is hard to remove it with soap and hot water. Fuller's earth will remove the most obstinate grease spot. Dissolve some dry fuller's earth in a small amount of hot water to the consistency of a thick paste. Then allow the earth to grow cold. When it is cold, spread it on the grease spot thickly and allow it to remain on all night or for several hours. When thoroughly dry, scour it off with cold water. Should the grease spot be deep it may be necessary to repeat the process once or twice.

When ice is broken in small pieces, ready for use in the sickroom, it melts rapidly. Keep a large piece in a basin or pan and cover with several thicknesses of newspaper and break off the pieces as needed. They can be broken any size desired and with little noise simply by striking the point of a darning needle into the ice and tapping it with a thimble.

Modern Woodmen.
Those who attend the meeting of the head camp of the Modern Woodmen to be held at Peoria during the week of June 14, will find that the people of that enterprising city have not been idle during the past year. Not only have the members of the society been engaged in preparing to welcome each other, but they have also taken a hand in the matter with the result that everything is now in readiness to welcome and take care of the greatest crowd that ever attended a convention of this great and magnificent society. The decorations of the different streets of the city will be on a most elaborate scale and must be seen to be truly appreciated.

I. O. O. F.
Newark lodge, No. 623, will confer the first and second degrees next Monday night on a class of candidates. All candidates that are eligible will please take notice and be present. All members are urged to come, as we have business of importance to transact. Bro Evans will have plenty of lemonade on tap. At the regular meeting of Johnston lodge, No. 422, last Saturday night, the following were elected for the ensuing term: N. G. Frank Gallagher; V. G. Geo. P. Hill. These officers will appoint their subordinate officers for the term. After lodge closed an ice cream supper was served by their incoming D. G. M., E. A. Pratt.

A time honored custom of the Odd Fellow lodge has been its annual memorial. This event was celebrated by Johnston lodge, No. 422, last Sunday, when a goodly turnout of the membership of this lodge and also that of the Rebekah lodge met for the purpose of paying honor and respect for their beloved dead. A committee of Odd Fellows was busy during the forenoon decorating the graves of those of the order who are buried in cemeteries at this place and elsewhere. The wreaths were made by the Rebekah members, and all deceased members of both lodges were well remembered with flowers. The members of both the Rebekah and Odd Fellow lodges met in their lodge room at 1 o'clock p. m., and at 2 o'clock marched in a body to the M. E. church, where a most interesting and masterly address for the occasion was delivered by Rev. H. McDaniel, a member of the order and pastor of the M. E. church at Alexandria.—Johnstown Independent.

Gideons.
At the state convention of the Order of Gideons, which closed its two days' session in Columbus Sunday, M. P. Ashbrook of Granville, was elected state secretary for the fifth consecutive time. The Gideons comprise an organization of aggressive Christian traveling men, who have a big membership throughout the country. Mr. Ashbrook is one of the six national trustees of the order.

The Pathfinders.
At the regular meeting held on Thursday evening, there was quite a lively contest in the election of officers for the ensuing term. The committee of arrangements for the field day to be held at Idlewild park Wednesday, August 12, will have a meeting at the office of Bro. Homer B. Bay, Room 10, Hibbert & Schaus block, Tuesday evening, June 16th, and earnestly request that all members of the order be present and take some part in arranging for a good time August 12. Our lodge is starting to grow again, and we have five applications and one initiation. We want a class of 25 or more by Aug. 12. Don't forget the date and be present at the meeting of the committee Tuesday evening, June 16.

Home Guards of America.
A special invitation is extended to all the members to be present next Wednesday evening, as arrangements are being made for a memorial service and decoration day, which will be held on June 21. Also a complete reorganization of the team and the new work. Our home is holding its own on the honor roll, but we should try for a better place on the roll. Come, every member, and help those who are trying to grow.

Knights of Pythias.
At the regular meeting of White Cross lodge, No. 608 of Johnstown, Thursday evening of last week, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:
C. C. James E. Barriek.
V. C. Dr. C. A. Day.
Prel. W. A. Alsdorf.
M. A. Bert Dresback.
I. C. Harvey Baker.
O. G. Warren E. Bates.
M. W. M. D. Shrador.
These new officers will receive their instructions and be installed the first regular meeting in July.

Maccabees.
Octagon Tent, No. 123, K. O. T. M., and White Carnation Hve, L. O. T. M. will hold their memorial services Sunday, June 21, at Cedar Hill cemetery. All members of Octagon Tent are requested to bring flowers and meet at the lodge room in the Ankele building at 1 o'clock, standard time. The Lady Maccabees will meet the members of Octagon Tent at Cedar Hill cemetery. Rev. Joseph A. Bennett will conduct the services at Cedar Hill. Music will be furnished by the Arion quartette.

RELEASED ON STRAW BAIL.
New York, June 13.—Because John Gormley, charged with many burglaries, was released on what afterwards proved to be straw bail, representatives of the Police Department and Magistrate Matthew P. Breen, who admitted the prisoner to bail, engaged in a discussion as to the responsibility therefor. Inspector McCallery, of the Detective Bureau, insisted that the magistrate erred in permitting unusual haste to mark the release of the prisoner in which he was backed up by Commissioner Bingham. Mr. Breen insisted that failure of the police to notify him of the release of the prisoner was the cause of his being at large. When Gormley's case was called in the Tombs Police Court, he was missing. Subsequently, an investigation which showed that James P. Kennedy, formerly a police court clerk, who had given property in the Bronx as security for Gormley's appearance, did not own the property. Kennedy was arrested and held in $500 bail on the charge of perjury.

A Man of Nerve.

On the P. and O. steamer Bonny Castle, bound for Calcutta, we had Lord Monson, lord high commissioner for British Burma. He had little baggage. He was accompanied by only two servants instead of by ten or twelve. He didn't put on the pompousness and the "side" expected of him. Instead of the icy reserve looked for and expected he showed an inclination to mingle with the other passengers. For this some praised and some criticised him.

We found Lord Monson dignified, but at the same time pleasant. It proved to be easy to obtain an introduction to him, and he was by no means a cad or a snob. Among the lesser magnates were an Indian judge, a civil service commissioner and several military officers, but they were given but very little more attention by my lord than the ordinary passengers. There was much chagrin over this fact, but it had to be endured. Taken altogether, we were a pretty jolly lot, and we became quite proud of the fact that we had a live lord among us, and it would have been one of the pleasantest of voyages but for what I am now about to relate.

On all long voyages by steamer the first class passengers are supposed to hand over their money and jewelry to the care of the purser. A few men who are carrying large amounts of cash do this, and a few ladies may put a portion of their diamonds in security, but it is a rule observed more in the breach than the observance. The men feel safe in retaining at least a few hundred dollars each, and the women must keep out enough jewelry to make an appearance at the dinner table.

As soon as the second day out we had a robbery on board. A passenger who had a stateroom to himself was robbed by some one who entered it. The robber got $400 in cash and about a thousand dollars' worth of diamonds. The loss was at once reported to the captain, but as there was not the slightest clew to the perpetrator nothing could be done about it except to advise the victim to keep quiet and wait and watch. This was done, and the robbery was known to only two or three persons for a day. Then came a second.

During the dinner hour a second stateroom was robbed. This was occupied by two men who sat side by side at the table and who had been warm friends long before embarking. While this robbery, which yielded over a thousand dollars, was pretty well hushed up, the captain took steps to try to find out the guilty party. It was laid to some of the servants of the ship, just as it would have been laid to some of the servants of a house ashore. There were 180 of us, and yet the captain went on the principle that we must all be honest because we were aboard of his craft.

Nothing is more uncomfortable among a large number of passengers than a mystery of this kind. They know that a thief is among them, and each one feels that he has a right to suspect another. It was reported that my lord was very much perturbed; that he said this and said that; that he was doing his best to help the captain solve the mystery. Meanwhile two more staterooms were robbed. The trick was done while their occupants were on deck in the afternoon looking at a wreck. We now became one of the surliest, suspicious and most uncomfortable lot of people ever housed in together.

So far as I was individually concerned, I solved the mystery next day after the double robbery. I was sitting in the music room when a young lady came in with a package in her hand which she was going to give the purser. As she was about to pass the piano she stopped and sat down to play and sing. I was some distance away, but I saw her lay the package on top of the instrument. After a moment my lord came in and stood at her side a moment to compliment her. During this interval I saw him pocket the package. There were eleven other passengers in the room, but if any one else saw what I did he kept silent for the same reason.

By and by the young lady left the piano, looked for her package and, finding it gone, ran back to her stateroom. Within ten minutes there was an outcry. In the midst of it it was suggested that each and every passenger go on deck and remain there until his baggage was searched. The captain vetoed this. To search the baggage of my lord, to say nothing of others, would cost him his place. There was just one more robbery, as mysterious as the others, before we reached Cape Town. There my lord left us and it was understood that it was because of them during the remainder of the voyage, and I believe that most of the passengers were prepared to hear two months later that the Lord Monson of the Bonny Castle was one of the slickest criminals in England and had played us off for a lot of fools and got safe away with his plunder. Had I hinted on shipboard that I had seen him take the package and believed that he was the thief the captain would have had me in double irons within ten minutes. The real Lord Monson was on a visit home at the time, and this man had had the nerve to assume his identity and boldly take a passage, and the trick worked to perfection. No doubt some of the robberies were committed by the two thieves who passed as his servants.

A Talk on Olive Oil

SOME INSIDE FACTS, NOT GENERALLY KNOWN, BUT INTERESTING. "PURE" is usually supposed to describe the highest quality of OLIVE OIL, but such is by no means always true. Without exception, the oil imported here is the second, and more often the third pressing—which though pure, is very much inferior to the first expressed. The best article obtainable in this market is the California product—THE SYLVAR BRAND. This oil is obtained entirely from the first pressing of the fruit, and is not only strictly pure, but of the very highest MEDICINAL quality, and is also entirely palatable. We supply this article at the price usually charged for ordinary grades, and will be pleased to have our friends compare it with any other product.

MEN'S LEAGUE

Holds Last Meeting of the Summer and Rev. Mr. Sparks Delivers Inspiring Address.

The parlors of the First M. E. church were well filled last night by a very enthusiastic and appreciative audience at the last meeting of the Men's League for the summer. After prayer by Mr. Hatter and a short business session, the League was favored with music by the League Quartet, Messrs. Marshall, Cosway, McDonald and Ferguson. President Mitchell was very happy in his introduction of the speaker of the evening, the Rev. L. C. Sparks, who spoke for one hour on the subject, "Silver Trumpets," which was treated in his own masterful and forceful way.

His address was a complete digest of the art of public speech. He showed what elements were necessary for a successful public speaker to possess. First, physical power, second, energy, third, charm of voice, fourth, gesture and facial expression, fifth, feeling and emotion. Back of all oratory is the element of sincerity. If an orator has all the above qualifications and lacks sincerity his efforts are of very little consequence.

The speaker never spoke more eloquently or forcefully than he did last evening. He pointed out the most noted orators of the world's history, naming their elements of power and the effect on the nations and peoples to which they belonged. While many of the orators of the different ages possessed more or less of the qualities essential to a successful public speaker, he pointed out that the one who possessed all of these perfectly was Jesus Christ, and the secret of

Lost — Diamond stick pin, between Fifth street and Bismark Cafe. Liberal reward. Return to Bismark Cafe.

The foregoing advertisement appeared in Friday's Advocate. The paper went to press at 3:30 p. m. and at 4:10 p. m. the $150 diamond was in possession of its owner, Mr. William Schlegel.

Mr. Schlegel had lost the pin at 12:30 p. m. Friday. He gave up hope of recovering the diamond but thought he would try a 25 cent want ad in this paper. Now he is glad he did so.

It seems that the pin was picked up by a West End man who dropped into the Newark Liquor store on the north side and sold it for $2 to Wm. Von Aschen. Mr. Von Aschen recognized the pin as the real thing and assumed that the loser would advertise for it. A few minutes later the Advocate carrier delivered to Mr. Von Aschen the evening paper. He turned to page 3, phoned to the Bismark and Mr. Schlegel soon had his pin.

Mr. Schlegel was so well pleased that he bought Mr. Von Aschen a fine suit of clothes and came over to the office to thank the Advocate for doing him a good service.

WM. P. ELLIOTT TO FR. O'BOYLAN

Rev. B. M. O'Boylan has just received the following letter from Wm. P. Elliott, a former Locking county man, who lives at 950 South Fairfield avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"Your straightforward and timely letter in behalf of James F. Lingafelter in the Advocate strikes a cord of justice which is not more nor less than humane. The community in which I grew up is to be congratulated that there are some influential persons in it who are able and disposed to bring to general knowledge the actual condition of health and suffering of this unfortunate neighbor.

"We all knew him from childhood as a descendant of a long line of honest, intelligent, hardworking farmers. All who stand nearest to him today are confident that in spite of the great misfortunes that have overtaken him, he has not disgraced his ancestry, and has not forfeited the right to our respect and love.

"I am as well satisfied as you are of his innocence of any intent to wrong his fellow men, and I believe that his old neighborhood in Newton township, if they could be informed of all the facts in the premises, would rise as one man to petition for his release from imprisonment.

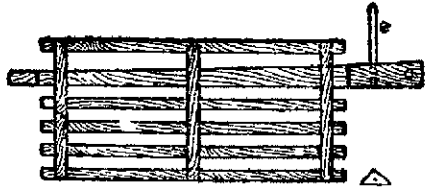

"As the almost foster brother of James F. Lingafelter in his boyhood, I cannot but thank you sincerely in the name of common humanity, if nothing more, for the stand you are taking. Yours very truly,

EARLY LAMB PRODUCTION.

One of the most interesting and profitable branches of the sheep business is the growing of winter lambs for the early spring market. This requires special care, constant vigilance and properly arranged barn and yards. But most of the work comes at a time of year when outside farming operations do not claim attention. This is no small item in its favor. Writing of his experience in this line in New England Homestead, F. G. Scott of New Hampshire says:

As to breed of ram, the Down is preferable. The ewes may be Down or one of the heavier wool breeds, such as Rambouillet or Dorset. I am breeding Rambouillet ewes to a Hampshire ram. The result of this cross is a lamb well marked in face and legs, broad chest and heavy quarters and a splendid fleece at maturity. Mine are western ewes, and owing to the conditions under which they have been raised, they flock closely together in pasture and are not at all inclined to be breachy. They are heavy milkers and make good mothers.

The hours of feeding are 7 a. m. and 4.30 p. m. In the morning the flock is admitted to the waiting yard. Next the grain is strewn in the troughs in the feed yard. For this purpose a two bushel bag is most convenient. Meanwhile the flock has collected at the gate ready for admittance. The gate is then swung up and away from the sheep, and the whole flock immediately rushes through under the gate to the feed troughs.

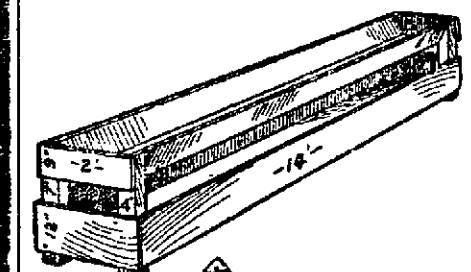

The gate is then lowered and the racks inside the barn filled with hay. By the time the sheep have finished their grain the gate is swung up again, and they quickly pass back into the barn, eager for the hay ration. One man can easily hay and grain 100 sheep in ten minutes. But best of all is the fact that by use of this gate each member of the flock gets absolutely a square deal and a square meal.

Suppose the gate to be sixteen feet long. When it is opened the sheep enter the feed yard sixteen abreast, those in front being compelled by the rush of those behind to pass on to the farther troughs. Thus the entire flock begins eating at practically the same instant. The gate's simplicity and worth at once commend it to practical sheep men.

In constructing the gate the main center piece A, in which the lever E is placed, is preferably a dry pine pole of 4 by 4 inch and should be two feet longer than length of gate desired. It rests and turns at either end upon a short piece of board nailed crosswise on two posts set in the ground, with proper space between for the pole. The lever has a small hole near the end in which an iron rod is placed with hook on end to engage a spike or bolt driven into one of the posts near the ground, so that the gate can when desired be fastened open.

The troughs in feed yard are V shaped, made of a six inch and a seven inch board nailed together and stand on legs of 2 by 4. Spikes are driven through bottom of legs into the ground to prevent shifting of troughs.

Hayracks are twenty-four inches wide, thirty inches high and fourteen feet long, with no bottom. Legs are of 2 by 4, lower board twelve inches wide, upper board nine inches wide on ends of rack and ten inches wide on sides. The upper side boards are set at an angle. This prevents waste of hay and also stiffens rack in center. Space between upper and lower boards is seven inches. Material for one of these racks consists of two side boards 10 inches by 14 feet, two end boards 9 inches by 2 feet, two ends boards 12 by 26 inches, two side boards 12 inches by 14 feet, four pieces 2 by 4 cut thirty inches on long side and twenty one inches on short side, as shown in figure; two pieces 7 by 4 cut twenty eight inches on long side and nineteen inches on short side. The latter are placed in middle of each side, one on each side.

At two months old the lambs should weigh forty to forty-five pounds. Some markets like them at this age, others prefer them heavier, and either shipped alive, or neatly dressed and sewed up in muslin and burlap. If properly marketed such lambs should return a good profit to the grower.

English Sheep Fattening.

Some English farmers fatten their sheep on grass alone, but the large majority feed some concentrate in addition, cottonseed or linseed cake being generally used. Some good feeders use a small amount of bran in connection with it, while others feed equal parts of cottonseed and linseed cake. The amount varies from three-fourths to one and a fourth pounds per head per day.

On the voyage to Europe I met Mr. Lindenborn, and shortly after my return I again went to London and we were married there eight years ago.

OVERDUE VESSEL IN PORT.

San Francisco, June 13—After being placed on the overdue list and quoted at 15 per cent insurance, the British ship Drummer arrived at this port last night, 95 days out from Sydney, Australia. A succession of light winds and calms delayed the vessel.

The foregoing advertisement appeared in Friday's Advocate. The paper went to press at 3:30 p. m. and at 4:40 p. m. the $150 diamond was in possession of its owner, Mr. William Schlegel.

Mr. Schlegel had lost the pin at 12:30 p. m. Friday. He gave up hope of recovering the diamond but thought he would try a 25 cent want ad in this paper. Now he is glad he did so.

It seems that the pin was picked up by a West End man who dropped into the Newark Liquor store on the north side and sold it for $2 to Wm. Von Aschen. Mr. Von Aschen recognized the pin as the real thing and assumed that the loser would advertise for it. A few minutes later the Advocate carrier delivered to Mr. Von Aschen the evening paper. He turned to page 3, phoned to the Bismark and Mr. Schlegel soon had his pin.

Mr. Schlegel was so well pleased that he bought Mr. Von Aschen a fine suit of clothes and came over to the office to thank the Advocate for doing him a good service.

GIRL'S DRESS SET ABLAZE BY A FIRE CRACKER

Camden, N. J., June 13—While crossing a street yesterday the dress of Julia Shick, of No. 605 Mt. Vernon street, was set on fire by a giant fire cracker sent off by a boy. Spectators extinguished the flames, but not until the girl was severely burned. Fatal results are feared. This is the first fire cracker accident in this section.

Rev. B. M. O'Boylan has just received the following letter from Wm. P. Elliott, a former Licking county man, who lives at 950 South Fairfield avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"Your straightforward and timely letter in behalf of James F. Lingafelter in the Advocate strikes a cord of justice which is not more nor less than humane. The community in which I grew up is to be congratulated that there are some influential persons in it who are able and disposed to bring to general knowledge the actual condition of health and suffering of this unfortunate neighbor.

"We all knew him from childhood as a descendant of a long line of honest, intelligent, hardworking farmers. All who stand nearest to him today are confident that in spite of the great misfortunes that have overtaken him, he has not disgraced his ancestry, and has not forfeited the right to our respect and love.

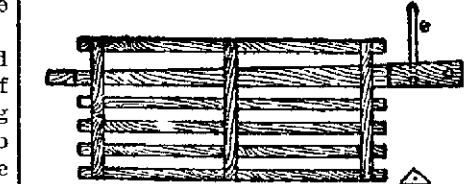

"I am as well satisfied as you are of his innocence of any intent to wrong his fellow men, and I believe that his old neighborhood in Newton township, if they could be informed of all the facts in the premises, would rise as one man to petition for his release from imprisonment.

"As the almost foster brother of James F. Lingafelter in his boyhood, I cannot but thank you sincerely in the name of common humanity, if nothing more, for the stand you are taking. Yours very truly, WM. P. ELLIOTT.

EARLY LAMB PRODUCTION.

One of the most interesting and profitable branches of the sheep business is the growing of winter lambs for the early spring market. This requires special care, constant vigilance and properly arranged barn and yards. But most of the work comes at a time of year when outside farming operations do not claim attention. This is no small item in its favor. Writing of his experience in this line in New England Homestead, F. G. Scott of New Hampshire says:

As to breed of ram, the Down is preferable. The ewes may be Down or one of the heavier wool breeds, such as Rambouillet or Dorset. I am breeding Rambouillet ewes to a Hampshire ram. The result of this cross is a lamb well marked in face and legs, broad chest and heavy quarters and a splendid fleece at maturity. Mine are western ewes, and owing to the conditions under which they have been raised, they flock closely together in pasture and are not at all inclined to be breachy. They are heavy milkers and make good mothers.

The hours of feeding are 7 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. In the morning the flock is admitted to the waiting yard. Next the grain is strewn in the troughs in the feed yard. For this purpose a two bushel bag is most convenient. Meanwhile the flock has collected at the gate ready for admittance. The gate is then swung up and away from the sheep, and the whole flock immediately rushes through under the gate to the feed troughs.

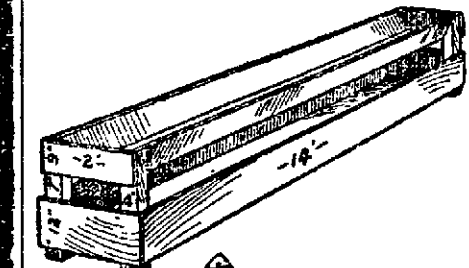

The gate is then lowered and the racks inside the barn filled with hay. By the time the sheep have finished their grain the gate is swung up again, and they quickly pass back into the barn, eager for the hay ration. One man can easily hay and grain 100 sheep in ten minutes. But best of all is the fact that by use of this gate each member of the flock gets absolutely a square deal and a square meal.

Suppose the gate to be sixteen feet long. When it is opened the sheep enter the feed yard sixteen abreast, those in front being compelled by the rush of those behind to pass on to the farther troughs. Thus the entire flock begins eating at practically the same instant. The gate's simplicity and worth at once commend it to practical sheep men.

In constructing the gate the main center piece A, in which the lever E is placed, is preferably a dry pine pole of 4 by 4 inch and should be two feet longer than length of gate desired. It rests and turns at either end upon a short piece of board nailed crosswise on two posts set in the ground, with proper space between for the pole. The lever has a small hole near the end in which an iron rod is placed with hook on end to engage a spike or bolt driven into one of the posts near the ground, so that the gate can when desired be fastened open.

The troughs in feed yard are V shaped, made of a six inch and a seven inch board nailed together and stand on legs of 2 by 4. Spikes are driven through bottom of legs into the ground to prevent shifting of troughs.

Hayracks are twenty-four inches wide, thirty inches high and fourteen feet long, with no bottom. Legs are of 2 by 4, lower board twelve inches wide, upper board nine inches wide on ends of rack and ten inches wide on sides. The upper side boards are set at an angle. This prevents waste of hay and also stiffens rack in center. Space between upper and lower boards is seven inches. Material for one of these racks consists of two side boards 10 inches by 14 feet, two end boards 9 inches by 2 feet, two ends boards 12 by 26 inches, two side boards 12 inches by 14 feet, four pieces 2 by 4 cent thirty inches on long side and twenty-one inches on short side, as shown in figure; two pieces 2 by 4 cent twenty-eight inches on long side and nineteen inches on short side. The latter are placed in middle of rack, one on each side.

At two months old the lambs should weigh forty to forty-five pounds. Some markets like them at this weight; others prefer them heavier. They are either shipped alive, two in a crate, or neatly dressed and sewed up in muslin and burlap. If properly marketed, such lambs should return a good profit to the grower.

English Sheep Fattening.

Some English farmers fatten their sheep on grass alone, but the large majority feed some concentrate in addition, cottonseed or linseed cake being generally used. Some good feeders use a small amount of bran in connection with it, while others feed equal parts of cottonseed and linseed cake. The amount varies from three-fourths to one and a fourth pounds per head per day.

HAS RETURNED TO STAGE.

New York, June 13.—As between the quietness of home and the glare of the footlights, Mrs. David Lindenberg, wife of a wealthy art dealer, said she had chosen the latter. Mr. and Mrs. Lindenberg now are living apart, and, reassuming her former professional title of Bertie Martin she will return to the stage as a member of the chorus of a musical review which after an opening performance in Atlantic City, is to come to New York.

"My former experience on the stage," said Mrs. Lindenberg, "was of rather brief duration. I contracted to appear in the chorus of 'El Capitán' when DeWolf Hopper took that comic opera to London. The members of the chorus were asked to go second-class to England. I refused, paid the difference, voyaged first-class on the steamer, and the brought suit in London against Mr. Hopper for that difference. I lost the case, however, and returned to New York, where I appeared for three weeks with the Rogers Brothers. On the voyage to Europe I met Mr. Lindenberg, and shortly after my return I again went to London and we were married there eight years ago.

"After our return to New York City I frequently appeared in society. But society bored me to extinction almost. They drink more in society than I care to, and they gumble too. I prefer the activities of the stage to bridge and the other so-called diversions of society—empty and unsatisfying world."

GRANDDAUGHTER

Of Ebenezer Zane Dies in Belmont County at the Age of Ninety Years.

Will Have Charge of Baptist Church at Kinkersville—Zanesville Wanted to Keep Him.

St. Clairsville, June 13.—Miss Rebecca Clarke, known to friends and relatives alike as "Aunt Rebecca," passed away Thursday at her home in Belmont county, two miles west of Bridgeport. Deceased was in the 90th year of her age, and was known all over the county for her works of charity, she having helped the needy families around her home, and the latter was always open for the entertainment of the unfortunate, and a helping hand was never refused to any worthy applicant.

Miss Clarke was the youngest daughter of Captain John Clarke, who was at the Battle of Brandywine, and later commanded a company of light horsemen in Virginia, and participated in General Lee's expeditions.

Her mother was a daughter of Col. Ebenezer Zane, who was conspicuous in the history of this vicinity. Miss Clarke was born west of Bridgeport, and before the days of the railroad, used to make the trip on horseback with her mother to Zanesville. She witnessed the first steamboat on the Ohio river, and remembered the appearance of the first stage coach, and later of the telegraph, railroads and all the inventions of the past 75 years.

VACATION TRIPS

Many People Already Making Preparations to Leave.

With the summer months around the corner, many of our women, of the social and professional classes, are making their vacation plans. Many are going to the lake, many to the mountains, and many to the seashore. The great number of people who are going to the lake, we must say, is a very large one. The average vacationer in this city will probably be going to the lake, and many of them will be going to the lake in a motor car. The average vacationer in this city will probably be going to the lake, and many of them will be going to the lake in a motor car.

ALPHABET IN BIBLE VERSE.

In the 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra, can be found every letter of the English alphabet. It runs thus: "And I, even I, Artaxerxes, the king, do make a decree to all the treasures which are beyond the river, that whosoever Ezra, the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."

But, still more wonderful, in the 8th verse of the 3rd chapter of Zephaniah, is contained every letter, including finals of the Hebrew language. —London Globe.

THE NAUGHTY GNOME - TRICK-JACK AND JILL

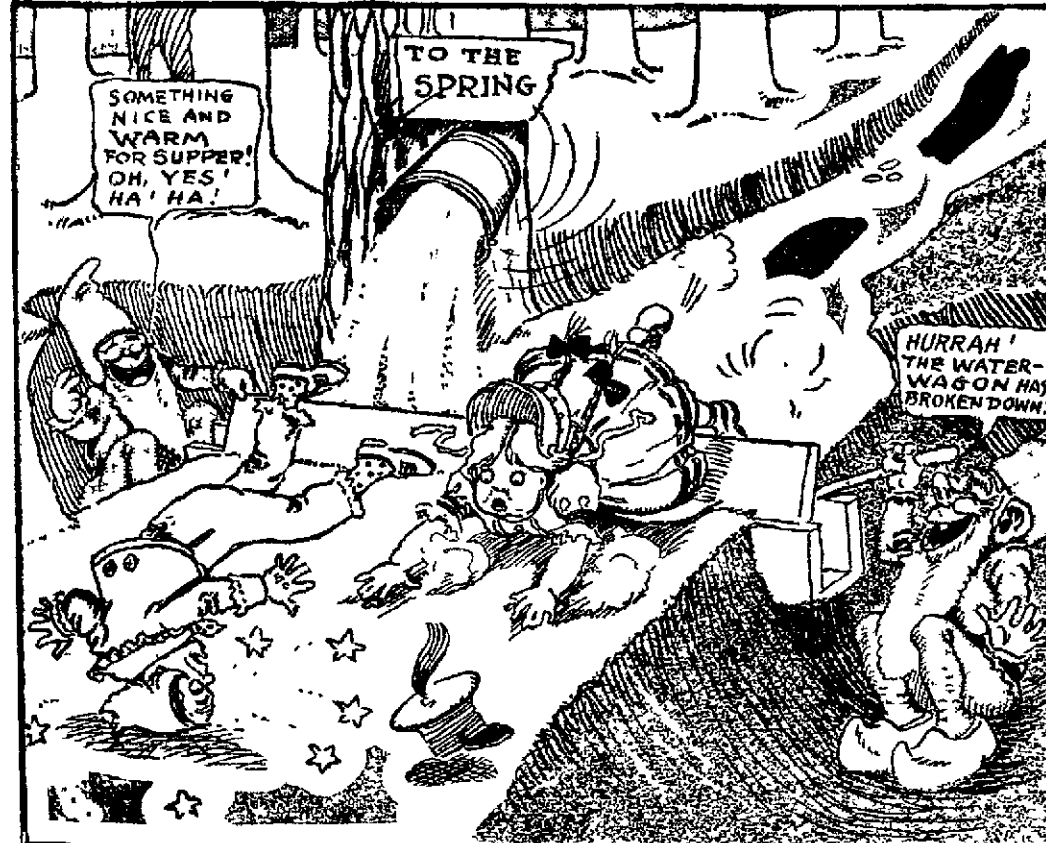

1—One day the Naughty Gnomes saw a little boy and a little girl going up the hill to fetch a pail of water. "Ho, ho!" cried Gogo, who knew everybody. "They are Mother Goose's children, Jack and Jill! They think they are smart because they can carry the water to make the tea for their supper." "What will we do to scare them?" asked Lop-Ear. (That's all he ever thought about.)

2—Now, there was a wooden drum crossing the road near where they stood. It was put there to carry on the water when the snow melted in the spring, but it was dry and half full of dirt at this time. As soon as Gogo noticed it an idea struck him. "I'll show you," he said. "We'll loosen the cover of the drum and when Jack and Jill come back we'll tap it up and trip them."

3—Lop-Ear thought it was a fine idea and grinned all over his face. So they loosened the board and hid it in the ditch, waiting for Jack and Jill to come along. Soon they heard them coming, and just as they came to the drum, the Gnomes slyly filled up the edge of the board, and—

4—Of course, the children tripped on it, and Jack fell down and broke his crown and Jill came tumbling after. (Just like the nursery rhymes.) They got a bad fall, which was just what the rascally Gnomes intended, and it tickled them so much that they roared with laughter. But—

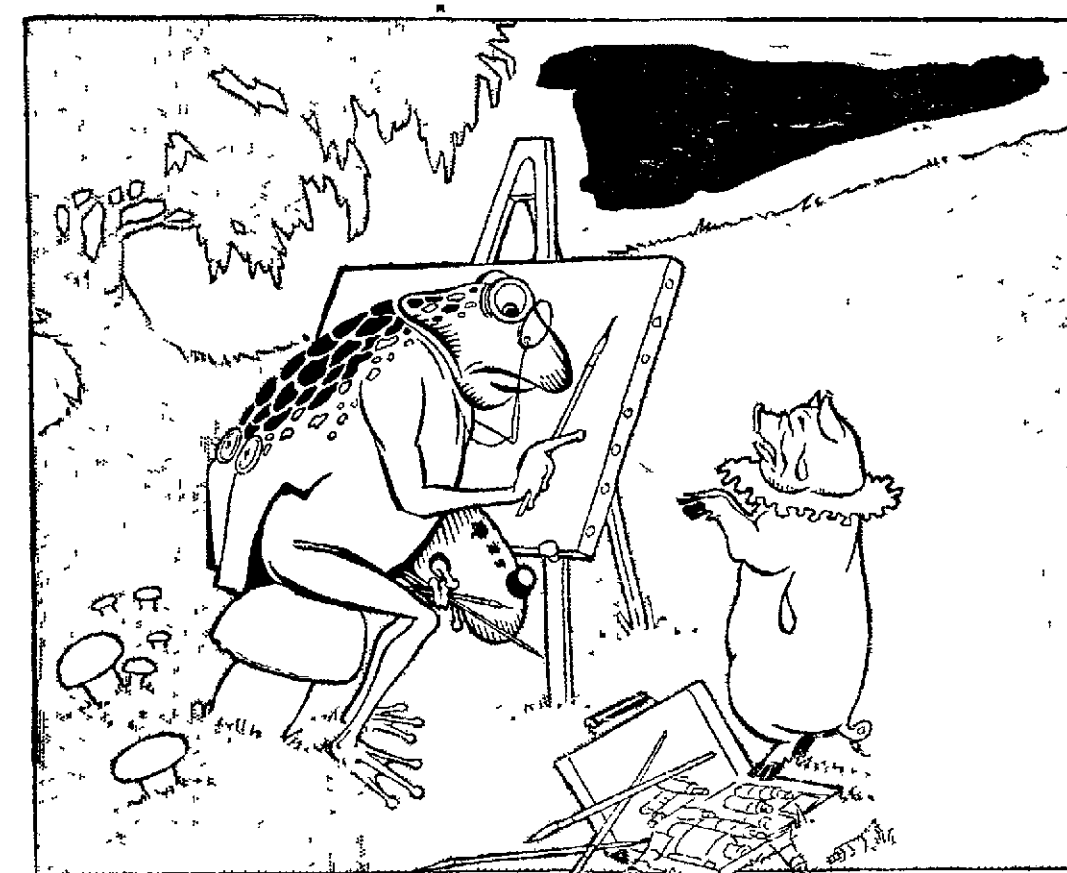

5—They forgot all about the pail of water! It went up in the air when the children went down, and then turned and all the water fell right straight into the open drum. Of course, that flooded it, and the water rushed out of both ends, carrying all the dirt and dirt with it right smack into the faces of the grinning Gnomes—

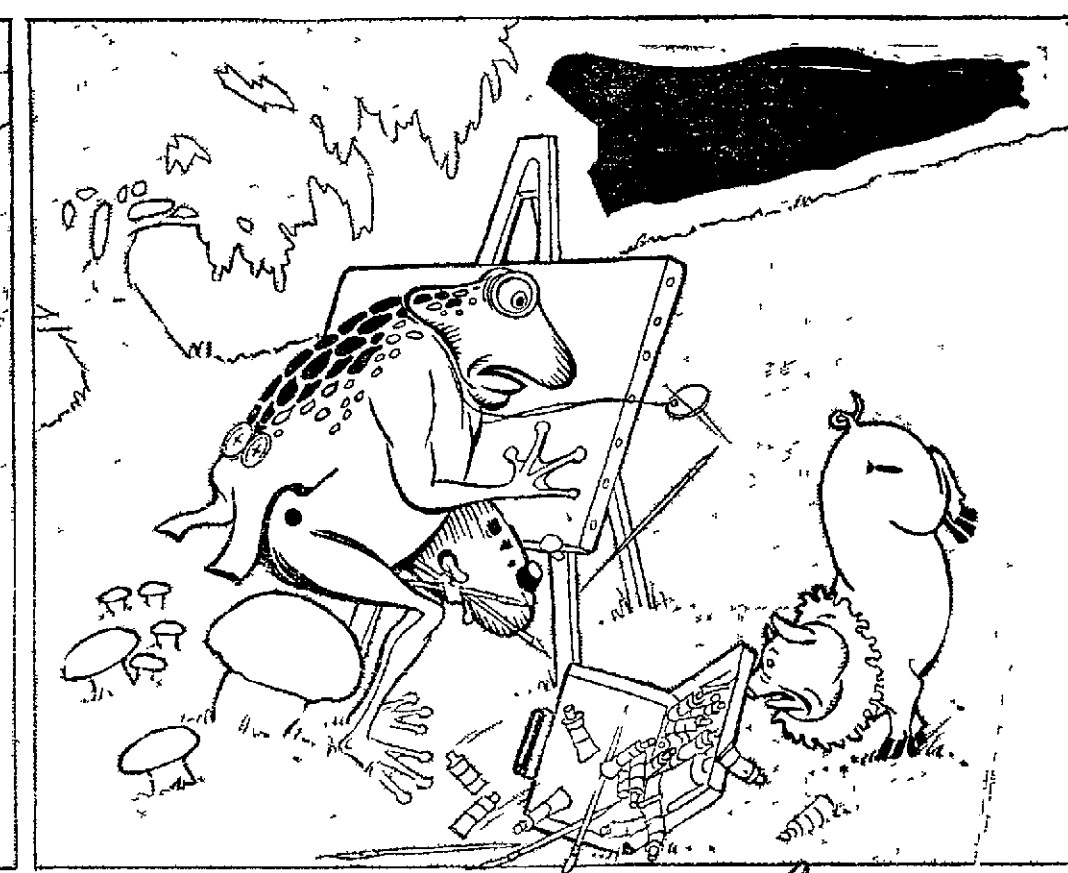

6—That quickly changed their countenance into howls of fright (for these Gnomes were like some little boys—they were afraid of water). Anyway, they hopped out of the ditch and ran down the road as fast as they could travel. The empty pail came clattering along after them, scattering them worse than ever. When they got back to the Gnomes' cave old Grandma Gnome took one look at their muddy clothes and gave them something "nice and warm for supper" (with a switch!) and made them stay in bed for a whole week! Served them right!

AN ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIND.

There is probably no civilized city in the world where in the past there has been so much plot and counter plot as in Paris.

Recently a workman engaged in razing a house in the Faubourg St. Germain on removing a square stone exposed the crown of a human head. As stone after stone was displaced a skeleton, dressed in the fashion of the time of Louis XII., was uncovered. The space in which it stood was just large enough to hold it. One side, opening into a large chamber, formed the door to the compartment, being a tall, narrow mirror, at the bottom of which were two wooden drawers flanked by candelabra, mirror, drawers and all moving together when the door swung. The architect at once sent information of the find to the Academy of History, and M. Andre Brosseau, the secretary, was dispatched to examine the skeleton. Brosseau was astonished to find that, though dressed as a man, the frame was that of a woman. The discovery filled out the missing links to a mystery of the time of Cardinal Richelieu that Brosseau had been long trying to solve.

In Richelieu's day dueling became so prevalent in France that the cardinal made it an offense punishable with death. Jules Beauchemin and Gaston Arnot, disregarding the edict, arranged to settle a dispute with rapier. Beauchemin was a noted fencer, who had often killed his man. Arnot was little more than a boy. Nevertheless Beauchemin was left dead on the field. The cardinal's spies, who had got wind of the matter, arrived on the ground only in time to see Arnot jump on a horse and leave the spot at a gallop. Running after him on foot, one of them seized a horse by the way and followed him to the door of his home. As soon as they could gain admittance they entered and searched the house. The young man was not to be found. There was no one there but servants, one of whom, being threatened, confessed that he had seen her master run hurriedly upstairs and into his room. The cardinal's spy spent an hour vainly endeavoring to corner his man. What puzzled him was that there was no egress from the rear that he considered possible. Concluding that Arnot had got away by some hidden passage, the entrance to which was only to be found by one who knew the secret, he went to the cardinal and reported the facts. The same day a notice was posted in the streets of Paris offering a reward for Gaston Arnot, but the duelist was never taken nor was he ever again seen in France, though mysterious reports occasionally got out that he was serving with the army on the frontier.

Now, all this was a matter of history with which the secretary of the academy had been familiar. If the skeleton found had been that of a man, a solution of the problem as to what had become of Gaston Arnot would have been found. As it was, the find only added to the mystery, for what was a woman doing in this secret space in the garb of a man? As to the house having been occupied by the Arnot family, that was uncertain. However, the riddle was solved by a bit of paper found in the pocket of the doublet worn by the skeleton.

The story completed was in this wise: Jules Beauchemin was a suitor for the hand of Henrietta, aged twenty-four, sister of Gaston Arnot. She detested and refused him. Beauchemin not being able to take revenge upon a woman, while at cards one evening with Gaston, a boy of nineteen, deliberately accused him of cheating. This was tantamount to killing him, for Gaston, notwithstanding the cardinal's edict, could not live in Paris without having resented such an imputation, and Beauchemin always killed his man.

Henrietta Arnot learned of this intended assassination of her brother. Inviting Gaston to drive with her, she took him to a farm belonging to her family on which lived a couple who were devoted to her. Gaston was inveigled into a room from which there was no egress, looked in and left in charge of the couple. In the early morning the sister, dressed in her brother's clothes, appeared on the dueling grounds. Just as the principals were about to take their places Henrietta paused, lifted some gauze from her face and said:

"M. Beauchemin, I am Henrietta Arnot. This quarrel is with me, not with my brother. I desire before we fight that you sign this paper, exonerating him from the charge you made against him."

Beauchemin, astonished, took the paper, signed it without reading it and handed it back to Henrietta. Then he threw down his sword.

"En garde!" cried the girl fiercely. Beauchemin refused. Henrietta made a pass at him which, had he not immediately stepped aside, would have killed him. He took up his sword, intending simply to parry her thrusts. This he did successfully for some time, when either his foot slipped or he became unnerved, for he received a thrust through the body.

It was Henrietta who was chased and who shut herself up in the secret closet. But whether she died from suffocation or because she could not open the door can never be known. It was supposed at the time of the duel that she had fled with her brother, Gaston.

Gaston's keepers, hearing that a price was set on his head, set him free and told him to flee from the cardinal's wrath. He never knew that his sister had saved him and died in consequence. — SULLIVAN KING.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF OHIO.

Proposing An Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Ohio, Relative to the Passage of Bills.

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

Section 1. A proposition shall be submitted to the electors of this state at the next election for members of the general assembly, to amend the constitution of the state of Ohio so that sections 18 to 22, both inclusive, of article II shall be respectively be numbered as sections 19 to 23; and sections 16 and 18 of such article be so amended as to read as follows:

ARTICLE II.
Section 19. Every bill shall be fully and distinctly read on three separate days, unless, in case of urgency, three-fourths of the members elected to the house in which it shall be pending, shall dispense with this rule; and the reading of a bill on its final passage shall in no case be dispensed with. No bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title; and no law shall be revived or amended, unless the new act contain the entire act revived, or the section or sections amended; and the section or sections amended shall be repealed.

Sec. 20. Every bill passed by the general assembly shall, before it can become a law, be presented to the governor for his approval. If he approve it, he can (shall) sign it. If he do not approve it, he shall send it with his objections in writing, to the house in which it originated which may then reconsider the vote on its passage. If two-thirds of the members elected to that house then agree to repass the bill, it shall be sent, with the objections of the governor, to the other house which may also reconsider the vote on its passage. If two-thirds of the members elected to that house then agree to repass it, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the objections of the governor. If a bill shall not be returned by the governor within ten days, Sundays excepted, after being presented to him, it shall become a law, unless the general assembly by adjournment prevent its return; in which case, it shall become a law within ten days after such adjournment, it shall be filed by him, with his objections, in the office of the secretary of state. The governor may disapprove any item or items in any bill making an appropriation of money, and the item or items so disapproved shall be stricken therefrom, unless repassed in the manner herein prescribed for the repassage of a bill.

Sec. 21. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January, A. D. 1909.
C. A. THOMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Adopted March 20, 1908.

United States of America, Ohio,
Office of the Secretary of State,
C. A. THOMPSON, Secretary of State of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is an exemplified copy, carefully compared by me with the original rolls now on file in this office, and in my official custody as Secretary of State, as required by the laws of the State of Ohio, of a Joint Resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, on the 20th day of March, A. PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF OHIO.

To Amend Section Two of Article Twelve of the Constitution of Ohio.

Section 1. That a proposition shall be submitted to the electors of the state of Ohio at the next election for members of the first Monday in November, 1908, to amend section two of article twelve of the constitution of the state of Ohio, so that it shall read as follows:

ARTICLE XII.

Finance and Taxation.

Sec. 2. The general assembly shall have power to establish and maintain an equitable system for raising state and local taxes, it may classify the subjects of taxation so far as their differences justify the same in order to secure a just return from each. All taxes, other than those levied for public purposes, shall be imposed for public purposes only and shall be just to each subject. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, conveyed or contracted away. Bonds of the state of Ohio, bonds of any city, village, hamlet, county or township in this state and bonds issued in behalf of the public schools of Ohio and the means of instruction in connection therewith, including grounds, public school houses, houses used exclusively for public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and personal property to an amount not exceeding in value $200, for each individual, may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation; but all such laws shall be subject to alteration or repeal; and the value of all property, so exempted, shall, from time to time, be ascertained and published as may be directed by law.

Section 2. All taxes and exemptions in force when this amendment is adopted shall remain in force, in the same manner and to the same extent, unless and until otherwise directed by statute.

New York, June 13—Larger and stronger than the famous vaults of the Bank of England, proof against earthquakes, fire, mobs, explosives, burglar—such are the mammoth subterranean vaults that are being installed under one of the Trinity buildings at No. 115 Broadway, adjoining Trinity Church.

These vast steel boxes, 100 feet long and 20 feet wide, are of Harvarded nickel steel armor plate, 36 inches in thickness. The circular door leading into them is eight feet high, twenty inches thick and weighs know if the news was good or bad. I saw her turn red, and, crumpling the letter spasmodically, she ran into the house.

That was the last of her waiting at the gate for letters. Whenever I passed the house and did not see her I would think what pleasure it would give me to turn her correspondent over a slow fire. I was sure he had killed her.

Several years passed, during which I delivered my little girl no love letters. Of this I was sure, for of all she received few were in masculine hand, and such came only at intervals. Then one day while sorting my mail for delivery I came across one on which the handwriting seemed familiar. Then I recognized it as that of the youthful correspondent, only now it had become a man's fixed hand. I handed it in at the house to a maid with other mail, so I didn't see the recipient when she opened it. At the next delivery my little girl appeared at the door and handed me the letter I had delivered unopened and readdressed, evidently to the sender.

"Do you know I just couldn't send that letter back? I should have been fired," I know, but I would have rather lost my position than let that little girl blight her life. If she had been doing it for any reason except 'mad' she would either not have replied at all or by letter. 'Mad' it was. I was sure, and I believed that if the fellow got his letter back in that way the matter would be ended forever. At the post-office I shoved the letter into a box marked 'Missent,' put a bit of paper in an envelope on which I wrote, 'Never give up the ship,' and sent it instead, disguising my hand and not signing what I had written.

"In about a week another letter came for the girl from the lover. I handed it in, not seeing the recipient. After that I delivered several letters at intervals of five or six days, and I knew the correspondence was on again. In a few weeks more when I whistled at the house of my little girl she opened the door herself and snatched her letter with some of her old eagerness.

"It was about three months after this that I was tipped to carry a big bundle of wedding cards to the post-office. They were given me by the girl herself. I braced up and made bold to say to her:

"I've delivered letters to you for years, and you know how much interested I've been in you. Won't you tell me what came between you and your lover?"

"You've been very lovely to me ever since I was a child, so I'm going to tell you. It was all his fault. In one of twenty tons, yet it is hung so delicately that a child can open and close it. It is controlled by a time lock, and nobody on earth can get into the vault except at the expiration of the set time.

The vaults will be used for the safe keeping of valuable papers and jewels.

his letters he spoke of my beautiful gray eyes. My eyes are blue. That started it, and it went on till he wrote horrid things to me.

"When they were about to be married I delivered letters to the young man at her house. I gave him the one she had sent back and I had stopped. He looked at it, then at me with astonishment.

"If I had got that letter," he said, 'she would never have got another one from me.'

"Taking a ten dollar bill from his pocket, he handed it to me. But I went on without it.

"There are some things a postman can't be paid for."

How to Apply a Mustard Plaster.

The convenience of the bought mustard plaster is so great that it has practically superseded the homemade one. It does not burn so easily as the latter, but, even so, care must be taken in applying it. To avoid chill, dip the plaster in warm instead of cold water before applying. Do not remove it at the first lament of the patient that it burns. The object of a mustard plaster is to burn, and there is no reason to put one on if it is to be removed too soon. On the other hand, it is inexcusably careless to allow a plaster to blister. Keep a watch on it, and when the flesh seems distinctly red, remove the plaster. Dry off the spot, apply a little vasoline or cold cream and cover with a soft piece of linen or old handkerchief.

How to Turn a Fold.

When turning a fold, either bias or straight, it is hard sometimes to fold it evenly and quickly. Fold and tap a strip of paper, securing it with a pin or muckage, and make it the width of your fold to be when it is finished. Now run the fold (wide enough to allow for seams) through this paper gauge and press the fold, sliding the paper along in front of the iron. This process turns, presses and finishes the band in a uniform width.

How to Test Drinking Water.

To ascertain if water is free from organic pollution place a lump of sugar in a bottle nearly full and cork it up, and if after thus excluding the air and keeping the bottle in the light for two or three days no milky cloud is apparent, the water remains clear, it may be considered free from the phosphates with which sewage water is impregnated.

CHARLES WARREN FAIRBANKS, FREQUENTLY REFERRED TO AS BUTTERMILK CHARLIE.

Studied Law While Doing Newspaper Work and Has Been Quite Successful Politically.

Washington, June 13.—Nicknames attached to public men stick closer than burrs to a woolly dog. The four-legged animal may be relieved of his discommodious alliances by a close shave, but no matter how a politician may seek to sidestep, the nickname clings to him still. He bears it through life and on his death bed he knows that it will appear in his obituary and will be embalmed in history.

It doesn't make a particle of difference whether the name is appropriate or not—whether it really indicates a personal trait of character or appearance or habit—once attached it stays.

So Charles Warren Fairbanks, long time senator from Indiana, more than three years vice president of the United States, may expect until the end of his days to see himself referred to in the local press as "Buttermilk Charlie," or "Ice-water Charlie."

Now Fairbanks himself joins in the general laugh at these appellations. But in the interests of truth it is necessary to state that neither nickname is justified.

Fairbanks will tell you himself that he does not like buttermilk, and that he has not tasted it since he was a boy on his father's farm. The name is supposed to have been attached to him in connection with a certain dinner in Indianapolis to the President of the United States at which the vice president is alleged to have served cocktails, thereby incurring the displeasure of sundry prohibitionists. But there is a nebulous uncertainty whether the cognomen was bestowed by a comic paper, or by some "fool friend," who, while admitting that cocktails were served for those who wanted them, found it necessary to assert that Fairbanks did not partake but contented himself with a glass of that product of the cow from which the substance has been churned out.

Whether Fairbanks did or did not absorb a cocktail on that historic occasion, it is quite certain that he did not partake of buttermilk. As for the "ice-water" designation the refutation is equally complete except that the vice president personally admits that he has used that beverage sometimes since he was a boy. But the changes have been rung on it until one would really think that to approach Fairbanks was almost equally as perilous as to run foul of a giant iceberg at sea. It is only outside his own state that he is regarded as "icy" and then only by people who do not know him.

As a matter of fact he is a cordial gentleman, warm-hearted and of generous impulses. It is the fault of his manner rather than of his heart if people receive the impression that he is cold, for those who know him best say he is the reverse of that.

There is one appellation frequently applied to Fairbanks which he possibly wishes might be true. He is generally referred to as a millionaire. He says it is doubtful whether he is really worth $500,000. However much it is, he made every cent of his fortune himself. Fairbanks is a self-made man.

First seeing the light in a log cabin on a farm near Unionville Center, O., in course of time he went to the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, O. There he went halves with a fellow student, shared his room, helped do the cooking, and added to their limited resources by doing a little carpentering and roofing out of school hours. He was rather an ungainly object in those days. He was six feet tall and very thin, freckled and with tousled black hair. Nowadays, with his methodical mind and frugal inclinations there is a place for every hair and he carefully brushes it up over the bald spot and down on the other side.

In those bashful days of early youth he made good. After graduating he became a reporter in Pittsburgh, and later in Chicago. At the same time he studied law assiduously and took one term in a Cleveland, O., law school and was admitted to the bar of the Supreme court of that state. Shortly thereafter he married Miss Cornelia Cole, of Marysville, O. They had been co-editors of their college paper at Delaware.

He hung out his law shingle in Indianapolis in 1874, and for the next 27 years, until he was elected to the Senate, he devoted his whole time to his practice and to politics.

A strong party man, he took a great interest in the Republican cause and an active part in every campaign in the state. He was a close political and personal friend of the late Walter Q. Gresham, and at the Chicago convention of 1888 he took charge of his candidacy for the presidential nomination. It was a great source of regret to Fairbanks that Gresham later changed his politics and became a Democrat.

In preparation for the campaign of 1896, Fairbanks identified himself with the movement for the nomination of McKinley, his personal friend, and was largely influential in organizing Indiana for him. He was, in recognition of his effective work, chosen by McKinley to be the temporary chairman of the national convention at St. Louis and in that capacity he made the keynote speech of the campaign, which turned out to be one of the most important in its effects upon the country's industrial and financial conditions in the history of the American people.

The same election which carried McKinley to the White House resulted in the choice of a Republican legislature in Indiana and in sending Fairbanks to the United States Senate. Fairbanks never took a prominent part in the debates on the floor of the Senate. He made a number of important speeches but they were always carefully prepared beforehand and read to the Senate. Because of his close friendship with McKinley he was regarded as something of a White House oracle and his remarks were always received with close attention. During the troubled times just before the outbreak of the Spanish war he was in daily consultation with the President, and supported him in all of his policies.

Fairbanks enjoys a good story even if it is on himself. He tells one of a time when he, with Governor Gear, of Iowa, was campaigning in that state and met Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky, who was speaking on the other side.

"After the meeting," says Fairbanks, "Blackburn met us and proposed that we should step into a convenient place and get a drink. I was very tired with my effort and the suggestion struck me most favorably.

"What will you have, Governor?" asked Blackburn.

"Governor Gear was thoughtful for a moment and then replied: 'I think I'll have a glass of mineral water.'"

"Fairbanks, what do you want?" asked Blackburn.

"I should like a glass of milk," I replied.

"The waiter stepped back and looked inquiringly at Blackburn, whose face wore a very peculiar expression.

"Oh," he remarked with extreme disgust, "bring me a piece of pie."

This, possibly, may be the origin of the "Buttermilk" nickname.

KILL EVERY ONE.

National Crusade Against Dandruff Gerns Now Being Waged by Prof. Giroux.

The Dandruff Germ is the greatest American pest of today declares Prof. Giroux, the great French Scientist and student of diseases of the hair.

In a recent interview in Paris, Prof. Giroux said: "If the germs of the dandruff are not soon annihilated the United States will some day be known as the hairless nation.

"The Americans must wage a relentless war of extermination at once and I am going to help them."

My receipt for killing Dandruff Gerns, well-known throughout France as Parisian Sage, is now being manufactured in the United States.

There is only one way to cure Dandruff and that is to kill the Dandruff Gerns.

There is only one preparation that will kill the germ and that is Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage (the original prescription of Prof. Giroux) is now manufactured in Buffalo, N. Y., by the Giroux Mfg. Co., and agencies have been established in every town in America.

You take no risk in buying a bottle of Parisian Sage at T. J. Evans' Hotel Warden block, the agent in this city, and he will guarantee Parisian Sage to cure Dandruff, stop falling hair, remove all diseases of the scalp or money back.

Parisian Sage is the most marvelous hair dressing and tonic: it makes the hair beautiful, soft and lustrous in one week. It causes hair to grow if the hair root be not altogether dead. The price is only 50 cents a bottle.

CONTEST FOR SONG WRITERS

Miss Maude Lambert, the prima donna of "Lonesome Town," the musical play that recently completed a long run at the Circle theater, New York City, scored such a phenomenal hit with the popular Will R. Anderson ballad, "Just Someone," and the encore were so numerous that there were not enough verses to satisfy the audience. It has therefore been suggested to M. Witmark & Sons, the publishers of the song, to fit her with a third verse.

This is to be used for an encore verse on the play's return to Broadway this summer. Mr. Anderson, the author of the song, is extremely busy at this season of the year, and is unable to attend to this work, and the publishers are forced to call on the public at large to supply the demand of Miss Lambert.

Therefore, they are offering through the medium of the Advocate, twenty-five ($25) dollars for the best third verse to the song, "Just Someone," and one copy each of any two songs selected from their catalogue of classics, "The Black & White," to the next two hundred persons sending in the next best. The winning verse will be placed in "Lonesome Town" at once, and full credit given to its author on the programs and other advertising matter.

These verses must be submitted, written over the music of the song, to "Third Verse Jury," 144 West 37th street, New York City. Expiration of time limit announced later.

NEWARK AUTOS OFF FOR LIMA NEXT TUESDAY

PARTY TO LEAVE AT 6 A. M. AND TAKE BREAKFAST AT VILLAGE OF JOHNSTOWN.

People Invited to Go to Lima and Help Land the G. A. R. State Convention.

A party of representative business men will go to Lima next Tuesday to urge the selection of Newark for the 1909 G. A. R. encampment. They will travel in automobiles, leaving leaving at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning.

All who will go, and everybody is invited to join the procession, will meet at the corner of Third and Church streets Tuesday at 6 a. m. The route will be via Granville, Alexandria, Johnstown, Delaware and Marion to Lima. At Johnstown, where the party will stop for breakfast, Congressman Ashbrook and H. B. Rusler will join the auto procession and go on to Lima. The 106 mile trip will be completed about noon and the Newark men will return home the following evening.

Banners are being prepared for the autos and badges reading, "Newark 1909" have been printed. Swisher Brothers will provide cigars for Newark headquarters at Lima, and every effort will be made to induce the veterans to select this city for next year's encampment.

Secretary Maylone of the Board of Trade, requests all who will go to Lima to communicate with him so that ample arrangements can be made. Those who have autos and who are willing to join the "Booster's Club" are especially urged to call upon or phone Secretary Maylone. So far a dozen autos have been secured for the trip, but more are wanted.

WILL YOUR ESTATE BE A BUNCH OF RENT RECEIPTS?

Is it not business to invest your earnings and keep them invested? Experience has proven that fortunes invested in real estate have remained intact through more generations than when invested in any other form of property.

For the head of the family the title to his home means the saving of rents and the possession of an asset constantly increasing in value. Values in real estate have been created by the growth of population. These are factors which tend to increase the demand for, and decrease the supply of real estate.

We are now building modern houses and will offer lots for sale with or without houses, in my new addition, corner of Church and Eighth streets. Streets will be improved by paving, cement walks, gas and water to property lines, no special taxes, all improvements are paid. When all improvements are made these houses and lots will soon sell and you will have lost another opportunity to better your condition.

Can you afford to let this opportunity pass?

TIPS ON CARE OF FLOWERS.

How to Keep Them Fresh, as Told by a Florist.

"Very few persons understand the art of keeping flowers," said a St. Louis florist, "and yet by a little attention flowers may be kept fresh for three or four times as long as people expect them to stay in good condition."

"The matter is simple enough. It is merely a question of temperature and moisture. Roses, for example, are grown at a high temperature in the greenhouses and are then generally spoiled by ill treatment after they have been cut. Grown in a temperature of 65 to 75 degrees, they are placed in an icebox, where the temperature stands at about 40. Then when sold they are taken into a dining or ball room, where the temperature is 75 or 80. Of course they wilt in a few hours, sometimes in a few minutes. Nothing else could be expected."

"They could, however, be kept in proper condition for a week by placing them in water and standing the vase in the coolest part of the living room. Every day half an inch of stems should be cut off in order to present a fresh suction surface to the water. If this precaution is neglected the stem becomes clogged with a glutinous matter something like the gum that exudes from peach and cherry trees, the water in the vase, however pure, cannot be drawn up, and the leaves and flowers wither for lack of moisture."

"In cutting off the stems a knife should always be used, never a pair of scissors. The reason is plain enough. The knife makes a smooth cut, leaving the cells of the wood open and unobstructed. The scissor blades, no matter how sharp they are, always compress the woody fibers at the end of the stem and leave them so tightly pressed together that it is almost impossible for sufficient moisture to find its way through to support the leaves and blossoms."

How to Check a Nosebleed.

When the nose is bleeding, never hold it over a basin or hold the head down in any way. This only causes further rush of blood to the broken tissues in the nose. The head should be held up and back, the flow being caught in handkerchiefs or cloths. One of the most effective and simple means of checking a nosebleed is to press on the upper lip. Near the undersurface of the lip runs the artery that supplies the interior nasal passages where the ruptures occur. If this is pressed, the flow of blood is mechanically checked, thus allowing the blood around the broken tissues to congeal and seal up the opening. If merely pressing the finger does not succeed, place a wad of paper under the lip and fold the lip over it, holding it down tight. Again, if this does not succeed and a drug store is near, get some adrenalin, saturate a piece of cotton with it and apply to the interior of the nose from where the blood flows.

How to Clean a Fan.

To clean a fan place it in a dish and cover with gasoline. Do not attempt to rub the material or the chiffon or lace will in all probability tear apart. Press tightly until the dirt comes out, and a fan certainly collects a great deal of dust. After freeing it from dust and all blemishes put it into clean gasoline in which there is a drop of bluing. Spread the fan out on a piece of white cloth, pin the two points to stretch the material and let it dry. After it has thoroughly dried cover with talcum powder highly scented and leave for one day. This destroys the odor of gasoline and makes the fan as beautiful as new. If the edges are the least worn, bind with chiffon ribbon, lace binding or a soft roll of lace or chiffon to match the cover.

How to Soften Water.

If one has an irritable skin and the water for bathing is hard something should be used to soften it. Bran makes hard water very soft and is good for the skin. A couple of quarts of bran put into a bag of cheesecloth will be sufficient for an ordinary bathtub full of water, and its use will make the skin velvety and fine. Oatmeal, barley, rice and other farinaceous substances are often recommended for the same purpose, either alone or in combination, but bran is the cheapest and best of them all. Tincture of benzoin added to the water makes it soft and agreeable. A few drops of ammonia, not too much, will soften water used for the hands or the face.

How to Keep Flies Outside.

For those who object to wire netting in the windows during the summer a new idea has been found to prevent flies and such annoying pests from entering the house. This new preventive is a window box of mignonette. It seems that the insects do not care to face the odor of this charming flower, so that it is an effectual barrier against their invasion. It sounds like a very pretty idea, and we may expect to see ugly wire screens entirely discarded and the windows decorated with dainty boxes filled with the sweet blossoms.

How to Preserve Eggs.

Dissolve four ounces of beeswax in eight ounces of warm olive oil. Dip the tips of the fingers into the solution and anoint the eggs all over. The oil will be absorbed and the shell and pores filled up with the wax. Pack in bran or sawdust and put away in a cool place. Eggs treated in this way will keep two years.

How to Clean Zinc.

To clean zinc make a paste of common whiting and ammonia and apply with a woolen cloth. A last rubbing should be given with a dry flannel.

Preserve Your Books

There is nothing so displeasing to the sense of taste as a well constructed library filled with books, the leaves projecting, covers half off, and possibly one-fourth of the contents of the book missing.

We Can Help You

If you will bring your books to us and let us make them as good as new, by fastening in the leaves and putting on new covers, it will not only help the appearance of the library, but will enhance the value of your books. Old books become more valuable as they grow older. Especially is this true of special editions and rare works.

It will make your books of reference more valuable, because you know that the entire book is in the proper place, with a good substantial binding, preserving the contents for future reference.
